We recommend to visit²:

Diocletian palace

Diocletian Palace is one of the best preserved monuments of the Roman architecture in the world. The Emperor's Palace was built as a combination of a luxury villa - summer house and a Roman military camp (castrum), divided into four parts with two main streets. Southern part of the Palace was, in this scheme, intended for the Emperor's apartment and appropriate governmental and religious ceremonies, while the north part was for the Imperial guard - the military, servants, storage etc. The Palace is a rectangular building (approximately 215 x 180 meters) with four large towers at the corners, doors on each of the four sides and four small towers on the walls. The lower part of the walls has no openings, while the upper floor is open with a monumental porch on the south and halls with grand arch windows on the other three sides. Over the centuries the Palace inhabitants, and later also the citizens of Split adapted parts of the palace for their own requirements, thus the inside buildings as well as the exterior walls with the towers significantly changed the original appearance, but the outlines of the Imperial Palace are still very visible.

Cathedral of Saint Domnius

Among the European cathedrals the one in Split finds its seat in the oldest building - the Mausoleum of the Roman Emperor Diocletian. Inside the cathedral, at the end of the second millennium, the history reconciles ancient pagan, Christian Medieval and modern heritage. Mausoleum of the Emperor - persecutor of Christians becomes a cathedral in the 7th century where altars with relics of St Domnius and St Anastasius, martyrs executed in the nearby Solin, take an honorary place.

Cathedral today is primarily a place of liturgy. The renowned part of the Cathedral are its gates carved in walnut by Andrija Buvina from Split. The two door posts show fourteen tablets each with scenes from the Gospels, from the Gabriel's Annunciation to the Resurrection of Christ.

The bell tower of the Cathedral (57m) is the most original Dalmatian Medieval architecture started in the 13th century. Today you can climb the steps all the way to the top of the bell tower, where a spectacular view of the entire Split awaits you.

The Golden Gate

Porta septemtrionalis is their Roman name. Emperor Diocletian walked through them as he entered the Palace on the 1st of June 305. They were built in the shape of a rectangle, with double doors, as part of the defensive military tactics (propugnaculum).

Province Dalmatia, and could only be used by the emperor and the members of his family. Today they are, together with the nearby monument to the Bishop Gregius of Nin (Grgur Ninski), the work of a great Croatian sculptor Ivan Meštrović, one of the favourite Split tourist spots.

Under the influence of Venice, in the 16th century, the gates change their name to Porta Aurea or Golden Gates, and this name stayed with them to this day.

Temple Of Jupiter

Eminent Scottish architect Robert Adam considered this temple one of the most beautiful European monuments. Rectangular in its floor plan the temple served to celebrate the Jupiter's cult. It lies on an elevated podium, with a six column porch in front of it. Embossed images on the portal, as well as the barrel coffered vault influenced the early Renaissance architecture of Andrija Alessi and Nikola Firentinac in Trogir.

Peristyle (Peristil)

Peristyle, as the central square of the Palace, intended for the Emperor Diocletian celebrated as the living son of Jupiter, finds its place among many temples. The Emperor would appear under the architrave of the central part of Protyron, and his subjects would approach him, kneeling down, kissing the hem of his scarlet cloak, or they would fall in front of him, their entire body to the ground.

Church and Monastery of St. Francis

The Church and the Monastery of St Francis, located on the Western part of the Riva, were built on the old early Christian site, by the grave and a small Church of St Felix, martyr from the time of Diocletian. Next to the Church is a Franciscan monastery with a 13th century cloister and an opulent library with over 3000 books, among which even some from 16th century. In the Church and the Monastery are tombs of prominent citizens of Split, like the father of Croatian literature Marko Marulić and one of the greatest Croatian politicians Ante Trumbić whose sarcophagus is the work of Ivan Meštrović.

Prokurative or as they are officially called, Republic Square resemble the Venice St. Marks Square. They are located west of the Riva and they were named after the arches found on the neo-Renaissance buildings surrounding the square on three sides. Most people to this day know it by that name. The square is only open on the south side, providing a beautiful view of the harbour and the Riva (waterfront).

Pjaca (People's Square, another square nobody in Split calls by its real name), is first mentioned in 13th century as St Lawrence's Square, and it was the first inhabited part of Split outside the Diocletian Palace, leaning to its western wall yesterday, it is also today, when Pjaca is filled with numerous bars, restaurants and shops, and when it became one of the most important spots for tourists wishing to enjoy in whatever it is that their hosts, citizens of Split, are enjoying.

The Riva started to look the way it does today two centuries ago, when the French, in time of Napoleon ruled these parts through Marshal Marmont. Today this promenade is the cities living room, the most popular and most important public place in Split Riva today is a pedestrian heaven, thrusting with Cafés and restaurants, an ideal place for having your morning or afternoon coffee, or for an evening out with friends over drinks. Riva is the stage of the city life of Split, a venue for numerous cultural and entertainment events.

Bačvice

“We are going to Bačvice...“, is tune often heard around the town, words of a joyous hymn to the municipal beach, officially designated as such in 1919. Bačvice is a phenomenon of nature, a sandy beach at the heart of the city, in the vicinity of the city harbor, and it can accommodate over ten thousand people. During the low tides in springtime Bačvice turn into a split version of Copacabana where many famous soccer players first displayed their talent, where the rugby in Split was born, where even in wintertime a unique game of "picigin" is played (a sort of volleyball, played in the sea shallows with a small ball). Bačvice today represents a best known promenade for all generations, and during nighttime is the favorite center of nightlife.

Salona

Not far away from Split, some 6 km in direction north, there is a real treat for history lovers and others as well: the remains of Salona, an old Roman settlement which developed into present-day Solin. Getting to Salona: Salona is situated 6 km north of Split. If you don't have a car, you can get there by bus 37 which goes to Trogir from the main bus station Sukoisanska or by bus 1 which goes every 30 minutes from the main bus station Croatian National Theatre. The entrance fee to Salona is 20 kn.

☞ Some Practicalities

The price of products and services in Split varies depending on the season and the location. In Split shops, you can pay only in kuna.

Below is an indicative list in kuna. (1 kuna= 0,134 €)

- A single bus ticket - 11 kuna
- Water (0,5l) – usually from 5 kuna in shops / 10 kuna at kiosk
- Shower gel from 14 kuna
- Small juice pack (0,20L) from 3 kuna
- Toothpaste from 14 kuna
- Phone card with 20 kuna of credit, from 20 kuna
- Chocolate from 5 kuna
- Fast food from 20 – 35 kuna
- A glass of beer (0,33 l) costs 13 kuna
- A ticket to the cinema costs around 33 kuna
- Dinner at a local tavern (including beer or cold drink) costs around 100 kuna

MONEY AND CURRENCY

The Croatian currency is the Kuna (not the Euro!), which is divided into 100 lipas. When listed as a price, Kuna is abbreviated to Kn. The Kuna comes in denominations of 10, 20, 50, 100, 200, 500 and 1,000 as notes and 1, 2 and 5 as coins. The Lipa comes in coins of 1, 2, 5, 10, 20 and 50. In Croatian, the plural of Kuna is Kune.

ATMs are widely available all over the country. You can pay with your Visa or Mastercard card in most shops, supermarkets, restaurants, bars, hotels, hostels and when buying transport tickets.

Are Euros accepted in Croatia?

Croatia is a part of the EU, but the Euro isn't the official currency in Croatia. In particularly touristy areas, you can expect to see prices shown in both kuna and Euro though. Unofficially, the Euro, the US dollar and the Pound Sterling are accepted by some local merchants. However, you shouldn't rely on the Euro, nor any other foreign currency within Croatian borders. Note also that if your bills are damaged or torn, they may not be accepted by local merchants and bureaux.

We recommend you change most of your Euros to Kunas in the City, since the Airport takes quite a commission fee.

COMMUNICATIONS: MAKING PHONE CALLS

To dial abroad from Croatian phones, it is necessary to use the '00' prefix, followed by the country code. You should then remove the first 0 of the local phone number.

The country code for Croatia is +385. To call Croatian numbers from abroad, you should dial the area code without the first zero after the country code (for example 00 385 20 xxx xxxx if you are calling someone in Dubrovnik).

There are no roaming charges when traveling to another EU country from 15 June 2017. International calls from Croatia can be expensive for non-EU residents.

WEATHER CONDITIONS

Split enjoys an intense Mediterranean climate of hot dry summers starting in mid-May and lasting until mid-September (last 2 years, October was hot too) and rainy, quite mild winters from November to mid-March.

SOME FACTS ABOUT CROATIA AND SPLIT

Croatia (Croatian: Hrvatska) is a country situated in Central Europe. It is to the east side of the Adriatic Sea, to the east of Italy. It is also bordered by Slovenia to the northwest, Hungary to the north, Bosnia and Herzegovina to the southeast, Serbia in the east, and Montenegro to the south. Croatia is geographically diversified country; flat agricultural plains along the Hungarian border (Central European area), low mountains and highlands near the Adriatic coastline and islands.

Split is the second largest city in the country and the largest city in the Dalmatia region. The city was originally built around the Diocletian's Palace (a fortress-like palace built for the retired Roman emperor Diocletian), where the locals sought refuge many centuries ago. However, despite initial appearance, the city is not a small tourist town. It extends over a large area, well beyond the ancient city center. Modern Split is a city with 180 000 inhabitants. It represents economic hub of the Eastern Adriatic shoreline (an unofficial "capital" of Dalmatia).

While wandering through the historic center of Split, you will notice the Roman walls, squares and temples. Because of its ideal climate, with 2,800 hours of sunlight per year, locals have other names for Split: "The most beautiful city in the world" and "Mediterranean flower".

Almost everything worth seeing is concentrated in the old town behind the seafront Riva, built around various remains and conversions of Diocletian's Palace itself, as well as its medieval additional buildings, situated on the Western side of the palace.

On both sides, the old town fades into low-rise suburbs of stone houses, jammed around narrow alleys – Veli Varos, on the Western side of the old town, and Manus, on the Eastern. They are very well preserved, and although there are not highlights, they're worth a brief walk.

On the Western side of the city center, the wooded Marjan peninsula offers fine views over the coast and islands from its heights. The best beaches are on the Northern side of the Marjan, or Eastern side of ferry dock at the Bacvice.

The hit HBO series Game of Thrones was filmed on the Dalmatian coast in Split and Dubrovnik. Split is a really nice town and attractive tourist location with its crystal blue sea, breathtaking nature, nice local people and thousands of years old heritage.

Places to visit in Split:

- Diocletian's Palace (Peristil, cathedral of St. Dujce, basements, Golden Gate, Vestibul, etc.)
- Old town – outside area of the Palace
- Riva
- Bačvice beach
- Marjan Hill (along with beaches)

Eat local food:

Pašticada

Meat lovers will be excited to discover pašticada. It's a traditional Dalmatian dish always served on special occasions and it's prepared with special care. The main ingredient, beef, is marinated usually overnight and then it takes hours to cook. Pašticada is generally served with gnocchi.

Grilled fish

The name of the dish doesn't really sound like a menu special, does it? Oh, but it is. Particularly, if you're lucky enough to find a restaurant where you can witness any part of the process or all of it: fisherman delivering the fish, usually mackerels or sardines, the cooks cleaning and seasoning the fish with locally produced olive oil and home-grown Mediterranean herbs and then expertly grilling them! An absolute must is also the side dish: Swiss chard with potatoes.

Cuttlefish is one of the main ingredients here and the ink it produces is not only responsible for the colour of this dish, but it's believed to be a natural antidepressant. So, grate some cheese over your black risotto and you're bound to enjoy a lovely meal.

Dalmatian pršut (prosciutto) and Paški sir (Pag Island cheese)

Dalmatian pršut and Paški sir are perfect appetizers to nibble on while having a drink or two with friends. They ideally complement each other particularly when served together with homemade bread. Dalmatian pršut refers to a dry-cured ham, but it's also smoked unlike similar variants from other countries. Paški sir is made of sheep milk, but it has a distinctive flavour that is achieved as a combination of natural environment on the Pag island and the cheese production itself. An absolute must-try!

Ways to experience Split and local living:

Enjoying Split coffee culture is one of the city's top highlights. You can sit and enjoy coffee at Riva, the most famous coffee spot or you can visit D16 in Dominisova 16 street, coffee shop with the best coffee in town.

Split is a nice place for partying especially during the summer season. Stop by at one of the pubs located in the Palace, there are plenty of them. You can visit clubs on Bačvice beach or walk further to Zenta club. Famous club in Split is also Vanilla club, near Poljud stadium. People in Split usually hit the clubs around 00:30 and stay until the early hours.
